THE IDEA OF IMLS

Artistic Impression of the New IMLS main Building

Wasswa Joseph, M.A.

IMLS Initiator – International Relations Manager

“Music is the only international language that doesn’t need to be translated” said Berthold Auerbach (1812 – 1882), a German author. Music can unite people in the whole world, produce unity and harmony in the community and can guarantee social and financial assurance for a better future most especially if taken to a professional level.

For this reason, Joseph Wasswa, a musician, a cultural scientist, a winner of the Promotion Cultural Award in Regensburg/Germany (2016), A winner of the Germany Promotion Award for people with migration backgrounds,

A PhD Student at the University of Regensburg under the sponsorship of the “Hanns-Seidel-Stiftung” Foundation in Germany, initiated right from the year 2011 the ambitious Project IMLS “International School of Music, Languages and Polytechnic Studies” as an academic institution and center of culture in the city of Masaka in Uganda/East Africa.

The International School of Music, Languages and Polytechnic Studies (IMLS) is the only Music school in Masaka city as most of the music schools in Uganda are centered around Kampala. IMLS seeks to extend services closer to the unprivileged children and youths deep in the villages of Masaka and its surroundings who would otherwise never have had access to such a golden chance of exploiting their music talents, gaining self-confidence and making themselves ready to face the future with self-sustainability.

More to that, the IMLS is a meeting place for international scholars ,musicians and cultural scientists, ethnomusicologists, tourists and people who are interested in promoting and merging East-African and European cultures. Bring your experience whenever you are to the Pearl of Africa – Uganda in order to nurture the young generations. Through different workshops, courses and lectures from native and international Professionals, Volunteers and Experts, children as well as adults will be offered an opportunity to improve their technical Know-How.
